Crackdown on college spending said coming

West Texas State University will probably not be as hard-hit as other Texas colleges when state legislators begin digging into higher education to cut costs during their next session, the speaker of the Texas House said Friday.

Rep. Bill Clayton of Springlake, told The News he shares with Gov. Dolph Briscoe a concern over the cost of higher education in the state, the proliferation of institutions and the ill-defined role and scope of higher education in certain educational programs.

Clayton said he believes legislators can put together a biennium budget in 1977 which will not require a tax increase and that he expects legislation to be introduced which will reduce the dependence of school districts on the ad valorem tax.

Guest at a reception held in his honor in Canyon Friday evening, Clayton said he and the governor are concerned about "waste" in the state's higher education system, and waste not in construction of buildings, but in administration of colleges and duplication of programs.

Concerns which he said he anticipates will be highlighted when the 1977 session opens include the student-instructor ratio in colleges, the proliferation of administrators, professor workloads, research efforts and others.

"I don't think you'll find this affecting West Texas State as much as the larger schools like the University of Texas system or the Texas A&M System," he said.

Clayton said he expects the scope and role of higher education to come in for definite scrutiny and he cited as an example of what he sees as the problem the large number of education agencies which are offering vocational education coursework.

"We have everything from the high schools to Texas State Technical Institute and the junior colleges offering vocational education," he said. "So what do we do?"

Competition between junior colleges, senior colleges and colleges for students in one metropolitan area is also deserving of study because the competition breeds duplication of course offerings.

Several studies are underway now, he said, which hopefully will give some answers on the problems in higher education.

Money will also be an issue in the next session, Clayton said.

"If we're careful in expenditure matters, we can write a budget in 1977 to cover 1977-78 and 78-79 without additional taxes," he said.

The state is projected to have income of about $700 million to work with, but existing programs call for expenditure of $580 million.

An aid in the effort to cut spending, he said, will be the findings of what has come to be called the Little Hoover Commission now studying state government in Austin, according to Clayton.

"Hopefully, some of those committees can show us where we can combine functions and eliminate waste," he said. "If they do, it will help us write the budget."

The House itself is studying ways to streamline functions, he said, to cut back on costs.

Public school financing will also be a key issue when the legislature meets, he said, since the last session provided a two-year bill to provide funding for local districts.

Ad valorem tax reform will be a part of the package of issues which will surround concern over public school financing, he predicted, and several committees are studying the possibility of allowing more leeway to districts in tapping tax resources.

"The property tax has reached its end in carrying the burden any further," he said.

Clayton doubts, given the resounding defeat of the proposed new Texas Constitution last November, that the issue of constitutional revision will be an issue in the 1977 legislative session.

While several constitutional amendments will be offered, he expects, no package of amendments to significantly alter the basic document will be forthcoming.

Nevertheless, he said, there might be some effort to pass one article or possibly a portion of an article which had been on the November ballot.

The movement, which failed to gain approval in the last session, to nullify Texas' ratification of the federal Equal Rights Amendment will undoubtedly be an issue again in 1977, Clayton said.

Speaker of the Texas House Bill Clayton reviews a video-tape made with Dr. Walter L. Shelly, left, late Friday after Clayton was guest of honor at a local reception. Shelly will use the tapes in government classes at WTSU.

Residential gas bills to rise by 20 per cent

Canyon homeowners' gas bills will go up another 20 to 25 percent this year, but a reduction in the cost-of-gas pass-through allowance granted Pioneer Corporation wouldn't really alter the situation, the chairman of the ad hoc West Texas Utilities Committee says in a letter to Canyon officials.

Fred Poe, assistant city manager of Midland, in a letter to Dr. J. Pat Stephens, a Canyon city commissioner, said he believes Pioneer "is still doing a good job at a fair price to us with circumstances as they are."

Stephens, a member of the committee, is to travel to Lubbock later this month for the first meeting of the group in about a year. Primary focus of the meeting is expected to be the rise in the cost-of-gas which Pioneer is charged in the field and passes on to local customers.

Bob Mills of Pioneer confirmed Friday that corporation projections indicate the increase in the cost-of-gas which the company will pass on to customers this year will be between 30 and 35 cents per million cubic feet of gas.

"I do not know of anything to do at the moment to curtail the increase," Poe's letter says. "Of course, we could all change our ordinances and reduce the pass-through. I do not recommend this for several reasons."

Hereford City commissioners are to hold a public hearing later this month to consider lowering the amount of the cost-of-fuel allowance which Pioneer can pass on to customers in monthly billings. Currently, Hereford and Canyon allow Pioneer to pass on to customers 100 percent of the cost-of-fuel in the field. Hereford is considering cutting the allowance to 85 percent.

Poe, who conducted a check of Pioneer books in mid-December, says the cost-of-gas has increased 73 percent between September 1974 and October 1975.

The increase, according to his letter, is due to a much higher top price for gas in the field, a top price which doubled in a year.

Pioneer purchases from their subsidiaries were not cause of any of the increase, Poe says.

"In no instance did I find any evidence of Pioneer paying above the going area rate for gas to any of its subsidiaries," he says. "In most instances, the contracts were for less than the going rate."

Poe also lists comparisons of residential rates for Pioneer and other Texas companies.

Residents picked up $1.47 for the cost-of-gas pass through in

No word yet at WTSU on NCAA's penalties

West Texas State University officials have not yet heard from the NCAA on penalties for recruiting violations, so they'll not have to appeal during this week's scheduled NCAA meeting in California, according to Dr. Jack Bullock.

Bullock, WTSU's NCAA representative, said any penalties which the NCAA infractions committee may impose on the university have not yet been transferred to the university.

"Fortunately or unfortunately, we have not heard from the NCAA infractions committee," he said, "so we'll just go to the convention. We won't be appealing or anything."

That doesn't mean, though, says Bullock, that the infractions committee is not expected to levy some penalties against the university for the alleged violation of NCAA rules regarding the recruitment of a high school basketball player.

"They'll do something, but we're not certain what they'll do," he said.

If and when the infractions committee does inform the university of the penalties, Bullock is unsure when an appeal of the penalties might be heard.

The Missouri Valley Conference last fall assessed penalties against the university for the recruiting infractions, but followed the same penalty route taken by the university's own athletic committee.

The MVC determined that the basketball program at the university should be limited to a maximum of four initial financial aid grants for each of the next two academic years; that Coach Ron Ekker and assistant Coach J.D. Barnett should be publicly reprimanded; and that the MVC should conduct an annual investigation into the basketball program for the next two years.

$22,000 HUD grant approved for street improvements here

The federal Department of Housing and Urban Development has approved a $22,000 community development block grant for the City of Canyon, Congressman Jack Hightower announced Friday afternoon.

The funds, requested in mid-1975 by the city commission, will be used to pave about four blocks of streets in the west part of town.

The money is funding for the first year of a six-year program of community development available to cities like Canyon.

But, local officials don't know yet how much funding they will be eligible to receive for the next fiscal year or the year after.

Originally, they were told in the fall of 1974 that as much as $760,000 had been earmarked for Canyon projects, but the total dwindled after HUD admitted a mathematical error had left cities like Canyon completely out of the funding picture. Special legislation by Congress in summer 1975 allowed the city to compete for the $22,000 in funds.

City Manager Glen Metcalf said he has not yet received any work from HUD officials on when to apply for a second year of funding.

George Loudder, a former Canyon city manager now executive director of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission, said Thursday he understands funds have been allocated at the federal level for a second and third year of the program, but he does not know how much will be available to Canyon.

Nor do local officials yet know what project they will seek to accomplish with whatever funds might be available through the community development grant program next year or the year after.

Federal requirements mandate that public hearings be held by the city to obtain citizen input in the decision making process in determining how HUD grant funds will be used, according to Metcalf.

He said there are several areas of need in the city which might be aided through the block grant program, including parks, water and sewer facilities, future streets and funds for the elderly.

The program also gives preference to programs which involve capital improvements rather than the offering of services, he said.

Cost-of-living raises common in other Panhandle counties

The granting of cost-of-living raises has become common practice in a number of Panhandle county governments, a practice which will be continued into 1976 for many, a spot survey by The News last week indicates.

Randall County Commissioner Dee Griffin said Thursday he will try again on Monday to convince his fellow commissioners to grant a minimum 6 per cent cost-of-living pay raise for county employees. His proposal met opposition last week.

A check with county auditors or treasurers in seven other Panhandle counties indicates cost-of-living raises granted for Randall County employees in 1975 were below those granted employees in several other counties. Last year Randall commissioners granted an across-the-board hike of 6 per cent to county employees

Swisher County employees received a 10 per cent in November 1975. According to the Moore County treasurer, commissioners there were expected to grant an 8 per cent cost-of-living hike to employees at a Friday meeting. Employees were given a 10 per cent hike in April 1975.

Hutchinson County commissioners have not yet set the pay scale for 1976 for county employees, who received a 10 per cent across-the-board raise in 1975.

Dallam County employees received a 10 per cent pay hike in 1975 and commissioners are to meet Monday. The Dallam County treasurer said he expects commissioners to grant a 5 per cent raise for 1976.

Employee salaries in Lubbock County were hiked by 8 per cent on Jan. 1, 1976, but commissioners there had not given a pay hike in 1975. They had raised pay by 10 per cent in 1974, according to the county auditor.

Potter County commissioners granted a 6 per cent pay raise to their employees for 1976 after a similar raise in 1975.

In Castro County, Judge Weldon Bradley said he expects employees to be given a straight across-the-board $50 pay raise. Last year, he said, commissioners raised the salaries of all employees making below $500 per year to the $500 level and gave other employees a straight $50 raise.

Griffin, in proposing last Monday that Randall County commissioners grant an across-the-board 6 per cent hike, stressed that if county employees here are not given a cost-of-living raise they will have lost spendable income by working for the county.

He said Thursday he will bring up the subject again for discussion. Commissioner Jim Fletcher strongly opposed the proposal during last week's session.

Griffin said the cost-of-living index rose by about 12½ per cent during 1975.

"For a person making $500 per month, the cost-of-living would be up by about $62.50 or about $750 per year," he said. "We gave them a 6 per cent raise, which is about $30 additional income and you take from that 20 per cent for tax and 5 per cent for social security and it leaves $22.50 for a raise or about $267 per year after taxes in increased spendable income. We shorted their income by about $439 last year."

Likewise, Griffin said, if the county grants only a 6 per cent pay hike for 1976, after a cost-of-living index of about 7½ per cent for 1975, the employee will experience a net loss in spendable income for the year of about $216.

"Everybody should have a minimum of a 6 per cent raise," Griffin said. "They (Fletcher and other commissioners) are saying we don't have the money, but these people don't have the money either."

Public flirting law aimed at Amarilloans

By LAURIE TELFAIR

Flirting was once against the law in Canyon and several swains charged with the offense were hauled into municipal court.

An old docket book listing court cases from 1926 to 1950 that turned up during the move by the police department into new offices at the civic complex, provides a record of the petty misdemeanors committed in the city.

Arrests for flirtation were numerous during the late '20s. And the fine was apt to be stiff. One man was ordered to pay $22.50 after being found guilty of violating the city ordinance against flirting in public. Fines in several other flirting cases were $8.50, $12.50 and $17.50. At least one case was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Public flirting is no longer prohibited here. The ordinance was apparently removed from the books at least 20 years ago when the Canyon laws were codified, according to city attorney Elton Cox.

"The boys were coming down from Amarillo and walking around the square to flirt with the Canyon girls," said Cox. "The city fathers didn't like that so they passed an ordinance against any flirting in a public place. Or so I've been told."

While few of the early arrests are as unusual as those for flirting, a number of intriguing cases are listed in the book.

Those that tickle the imagination the most are the several bearing the notation "case dismissed at the request of the city commissioners." Inquiries around city hall fail to provide an explanation.

City commissioners have the power under the city charter to sit as a court, said Mrs. Marguerite Strain, a long-time keeper of records at city hall. However, she said she does not know of any instance when the commissioners have served as a court and the charter was not passed until 1958. The last entry in the docket was in 1950.

Other entries in the book include charges of illegal selling of watermelons (case dismissed) and permitting chickens to run at large.

A motorist who was fined $8 for reckless driving found the fine too steep.

"The defendant was unable to pay the fine and left his automobile in care of the court until paid," is the entry.

The early law enforcement officers were stern about interfering with fire fighting. Several entries list fines for running over a fire hose or interfering with a fire truck going to a fire.

These laws are still in effect, reminds Police Chief Al Stewart and are enforced with the same zeal.

Cost-of-living hike needed

Randall County commissioners are learning.

Last Monday they sent the elected department heads of county government back to their offices to decide which of their employees should be given pretty good raises and which of them should not.

This approach places the responsibility for some county-level decision-making with the official elected by the people to be making some decisions. Personnel, with its high cost, has become a central source of expenditure and if department heads should be making decisions, certainly decisions about their own employees are logical.

But, on the other hand, those same department heads are going to have a tough time trying to explain to their employees why, when business and industry all around the country recognize the value of the cost-of-living raise, county commissioners believe their employees should work for the county, accepting what amounts to a cut in pay each year, just because it's such a nice county.

As figures compiled by Commissioner Dee Griffin indicate, county employees, just like employees everywhere else, lose spendable income each year they get a pay hike which is not commensurate with the cost-of-living. Last year, when commissioners handed out a 6 per cent raise, employees lost spendable income. This year, at least some of the commissioners propose offering no cost-of-living hike.

Frankly, Randall County has been blessed with some good employees over the years, employees who, county commissioners may find out to their dismay, will have good justification for seeking employment elsewhere if they must take a cut in spendable income every year. — C.W.

Attitude could hurt issue

While the remainder of the school board was relatively quiet last Monday night about plans for another school bond issue election, Supt. Jerry Jacobs and Board President Tom Keeling made it pretty clear they think their original $6 million proposal should go back to the voters on Feb. 17 for another balloting.

If Jacobs and Keeling prevail in their attitude, the board can virtually be assured the Feb. 17 vote will turn out about like the Dec. 9 vote, with the bond issue again being defeated at the polls. It is relatively safe to say, at any rate, that Canyon voters won't buy it again.

We don't like to have things crammed down our throats, for one thing. And, for another, given more time to quietly persue the original proposal, many voters have probably had second thoughts about supporting the original $6 million project.

As we predicted before the election, the school board is having some real problems deciding exactly why the Dec. 9 bond issue was defeated. So many issues were involved that no clear mandate emerged.

But, the attitude which has prevailed at school board meetings, and which hit a high note in a 30-minute solliloquy Monday night by Jacobs, is coming very close to being the key issue in many voters' minds as another bond issue possibility approaches.

It's an attitude bordering on arrogance and it's one which manifests itself in an unwillingness to rationally review alternatives.

Certainly, between now and Feb. 17, there's time to review the $6 million figure and the project it is to finance, and to try to come up with alternatives.

But, objective review of the situation stands a poor chance if board members consider the $6 million project pat and unchangeable.

Board Member Ed Wieck has come up with what seems to be a reasonable approach, given the more central expressed concerns, but other board members have not even reviewed the plan, perhaps an expression of the defensive attitude of the board leadership.

Like it or not, then, the attitude of the board itself could well be the central issue in the upcoming vote.

Of course, the attitude can change. We hope it does in the next month or so. — C.W.

Private mail service idea is a good one

Ben Ezzell, the country editor at Canadian, published an idea last week which is worth stealing, so we hereby appropriate it and hope it can be put to use in Canyon.

Ezzell, who's mad about the recent increase in postal rates — as is about everybody — suggests that someone in his community put together a local delivery service to deliver letters and packages just within Canadian.

At a rate of somewhat less than 13 cents per ounce, he figures, some enterprising entrepreneuer could make at least some money even if he just ran the service around bill-paying time.

Canyon folks could also expect to save some money with such a project, which would be ideal as a way to raise money for some of the college or high school clubs and groups which heretofore have been selling candy and what-not. — C.W.

Hindrances to public debate

By CARROLL WILSON

If one of the bases upon which democracy is built is open government, then democracy takes a pretty good beating sometimes at the local level.

Even though Texas legislators passed an open meetings law some years ago to ensure the public had access to the decision-making processes of local government, it's interesting how some local officials have consciously or unconsciously worked to stymie public involvement.

The intent of the law was to force city and county commissions, school boards and other local governments to make their decisions in the open. The public, if it wanted to come, could attend the meetings and be present when the decisions were made. The intent is very much in line with the basic principles of democracy.

But there are numerous ways to avoid public decision-making or at least to convince the public that they have no business attending a public meeting.

One method favored by the Amarillo city commission is the pre-session, which is a posted meeting held before the commission is to regularly meet.

In the pre-session, Amarillo commissioners sit around a board table and discuss each agenda item which is to be considered in the regular meeting.

There are chairs for about a half dozen persons other than the commissioners in the pre-session meeting room.

The purpose of the pre-session is two-fold: To exclude the public from the discussion portion of the meetings, and to assure efficient decision-making.

Canyon city government has used architecture as an effective deterrent to citizen participation. Consider the hard-back pews, uncomfortable to anyone, to which the public is consigned in the new city commission chamber. In fairness, it should be noted that current City Manager Glen Metcalf is not responsible for the design of the chamber.

Generally, Canyon city commissioners discuss and make their decisions in the open, even though what public is present may be uncomfortable. But, sometimes commissioners have a tendency to whisper, which makes it doubly hard for citizens to get the jist of what's going on.

The Canyon school board, which sits back in lush easy chairs while the public sits bolt upright in folding chairs, discusses little these days in their meetings.

Then, there are the Randall County commissioners, who discuss and discuss in their public sessions, who have a fairly open and friendly approach toward citizen participation, but who may lack in efficiency. The atmosphere of county meetings is entirely different from the atmosphere in city or school board meetings. It is more open, more free, more inviting.

By its architecture, with school board members elevated above the crowd, the school board chamber is itself less than inviting as a public forum. Likewise, the atmosphere of the city commission chamber is so church-like that reverance is probably the feeling of most visitors. And reverance produces in a person meekness or silence.

In fact, the extent to which county and school have gone either consciously or unconsciously to limit public discussion before their governing bodies is almost ludicrous given the seeming lack of public interest in coming to city and school meetings.

All of this is not just my reaction, after covering these various groups for years.

Dr. Walter Shelly, a professor of government at West Texas State, has for the last couple of years asked his basic government course students to attend the various meetings and report back on what they found.

In general, the students' reactions coincide with mine about the openness, the desire for public input of the groups.

Our world

What of the answers?

By ANN BROWN

What does a God-fearing, hard-working, self-supporting, thrifty father tell his 12-year-old son who asks, "Daddy, why do I have to work?"

The father's immediate reaction is likely to be, "Because I say so."

Any wise father, however, knows that if he has failed to instill his values in his children by the time they are 12, he has lost the battle.

If teenagers hear anything their parents say, they seldom heed it — unless they choose to do so.

Look at the question for a moment from the 12-year-old's point of view:

"Why should I work for a few things while my friends get whatever they want by shoplifting?

"Why should I work when my government penalizes my earnings with a progressive income tax?

"Why should I work when unemployment compensation, food stamps, and other welfare funds are available whether or not I choose to work?

"Why should I work when the lower my earnings the higher my benefits?

"Why should I work when being poor can bring me a steady income — tax free?

"Why should I work when the material things I acquire earn me the frowns and suspicions of my friends, and make me a target of thieves, muggers, robbers, tax collectors — and the Internal Revenue sleuths?

"Why should I work and have my earnings taken from me to provide for the lazy and greedy? Why not let others work and provide my needs through their taxes?

"Why should I work while Americans pour millions of dollars into the World Council of Churches to give to black terrorists in Angola and other trouble spots around the world?

"Why should I work to support a government which persecutes and harasses the CIA and the FBI, about the only government agencies still dedicated to the welfare of America?

"Why should I work and be forced to pay thousands of dollars into social security taxes to a program from which I don't have a shadow of a chance of ever collecting a penny?

(In 1974, S.S. reported obligations of 2-trillion, 400-billion dollars, with reserves of around $49 billion.)

"Why should I work to support the Social Security program which already has obligations amounting to about half the entire nation's wealth? What will it be by the time I am old enough to work?"

The 12-year-old's questions are unanswerable from the modern viewpoint.

Unless parents have instilled into their children by precept and example respect for God, self, and one's neighbors, it's too late for the teenagers.

Parents who leave God out of their homes until their children are 12 are usually too busy with psychiatrists, lawyers, and bail bondsmen to find time for Him then.

If able-bodied people were forced to work or starve as the Bible teaches (II Thess. 3:10), it would never occur to a child to ask why he had to work.

He would know.

Teacher test set in Feb.

The National Teacher Examinations (NTE) will be given at West Texas State University on Feb. 21.

Scores from the examinations are used by many states for certification of teachers, by many school systems for selection, tenure status and identification of leadership qualities and by many colleges as part of their graduation requirements. About 100,000 candidates took the examinations last year.

Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the tests, says they are designed to measure knowledge gained from professional and general education and in 27 subject-matter fields.

Bulletins of information describing registration procedures and containing registration forms may be obtained from Dr. Kenneth Waugh, director of the Testing, Academic and Career Counseling Center at WT or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Box 911, Princeton, N.J. 08540.

Accurate enrollment projections needed before vote

Gentlemen of the School Board:

During the January 5th School Board meeting, I presented a few thoughts on the bond referendum. As the result of an erroneous statement, i.e., that past growth was most significant from the Gene Howe area, the major points I had hoped to make were obscured. I shall try once again to emphasize the thrust of my arguments.

I am concerned with the direction of future growth rather than past growth. Justification for the Canyon School Board's Bond referendum rests upon projected enrollment increases in the CISD. Therefore, the Board must prove to the best of its ability the following: First, that population growth will absolutely necessitate new schools; second, that the location of the new schools will be advantageous to the district. Furthermore, the Board has an unbreachable obligation not to make any commitments which will outstrip future resources of the district.

There are an insufficient number of students presently residing in the district to justify new schools. The Board proposes over 3½ million dollars be spent for some 50 existing high school students and over 1½ million dollars for 125-150 existing grade school students. The Board is using the number of projected new students to justify a bond election. Consequently, it is of the utmost importance that there be a careful assessment of the projected growth figures. Merely projecting 5 years of past growth into the future, as has been done by the Board, is insufficient since it does not take into account developing factors affecting expansion. Also, a single comprehensive figure gives no indication of what areas will develop and what increase each area will be likely to contribute. Without this type of information, the School Board is in no position to render reasonable judgements on district needs.

Growth areas and school location are inseparable for reasons so obvious that no elaboration is required. However, there is also a relationship between schools and growth acceleration. Usually such growth is manageable and can be easily absorbed by the new schools. But, there is a real concern that CISD schools located in prime development areas of Amarillo would encourage population expansion beyond the revenue means of the district. Areas which might vote themselves into the AISD would be encouraged to stay within the CISD because of school proximity. Further growth will take place in the event that cross district busing does not materialize and the CISD will become vulnerable to a "white flight" situation.

I know that the burdens suggested by the potential growth rate of a large urban area poised on the northern boundaries of the district are a matter of great concern to the school board members and the CISD voters. We are in a dangerous situation if tax revenue and enrollment fail to balance. Therefore, it is urgent that the district proceed with caution. With this in mind, I present the following suggestions:

I. Undertake through research on future growth including potential growth area shifts, age distribution, population density, comparative figures on growth from other governmental units (AISD, PRPC, City and County Commissions, Planning Departments, etc.). It might be beneficial to hire a professional consulting firm to perform this needed research.

II. Obtain more accurate figures on revenue potential for various sections of land in the northern part of the CISD.

III. Denials to the contrary, the Board is not helpless in its ability to reduce the CISD commitment to take on South Amarillo expansion.

A. The Board can use its influence to encourage property transfer. The Board can indicate more positively than it has in the past its willingness to consider land transfers and work more actively to help developers and other petitioners through the transfer process.

B. The Board need not exacerbate the growth situation by placing schools close to or inside possible transfer areas.

C. The Board can meet in joint sessions with the AISD Board without mistrust and hostility and work toward mutually advantageous solutions.

IV. A new bond referendum could be presented for the purpose of building a grade school in a neutral rather than a prime development area between Canyon and Amarillo. Also as part of the bond election, fund additional classroom space at either the Junior High School or the High School to handle some additional growth.

V. The Board can delay for several months a new bond referendum until the community feels that the Board is genuinely interested in citizen input instead of merely indulging in a face saving exercise. Such a charge may be unfair but certainly the failure of the Board to establish credibility among the voters will cause the bond issue to be defeated once again and progress stymied toward solving the space problem in our schools. It seems little enough for the Board to do if it is truly interested in "quality education" for our children.

Sincerely,
Mrs. George B. Asquith

Reader takes issue with opponent view

Dear Carroll:

In Thursday's Canyon News, Mr. Collins is quoted as saying; "A vote for two schools now is really a vote for 10 schools in the future." I would sure like to know what his point is. If ten schools are needed in the future, one would assume there will be at least ten times as many tax payers to pay for it. I don't always see eye-to-eye with what the school board is doing, but I don't think they would build a school to educate the cattle grazing between here and Amarillo!

I would like to see you publish plans and alternate plans for the proposed new schools before the bond issue comes up, so that parents, teachers, and interested parties could compare and suggest. I like to know what I am voting for or against.

Sincerely,
Marcia Durden

Collins should know his school board

Letter to the Editor:

I am a mother, housewife, and my husband is a school board member.

I do not profess to know all the pros and cons on the school bond election. But I do get very upset when my husband and the rest of the school board is critized and run down, by a man who does not know them.

For this reason, after hearing about a radio interview on KGNC last week where Mr. Stan Collins spoke out against the school board, I called his home to see if I could come by and introduce myself. I wanted to meet Mr. Collins, since he does not know my husband, and invite him to meet myself, my husband and our family. I left my number and the message, "that I was not calling to bawl him out, but I was calling to ask if I might come by and meet him." My phone call was never returned. I stayed here 2 days and nights for the call.

I feel Mr. Collins should get to Canyon's Herbert D. Hutchins is represented in the KINSA display by this portrait of his daughter Charla.

The Kitchen Sink

By SUSAN WILSON

Every mother should have a rainy day box on hand.

Or so say the cute little books that tell you how to entertain the kids under difficult circumstances.

I've noticed that these books have a tendency to overdo the cheerfulness. For instance. I can see making snow ice cream on a snow day. Or even "when you find a sweet potato that's past the roasting stage, pop it in a jar with water and let you kids watch the sweet potato root and grow beautiful lush foilage." Oh, that my two-year-old would stand enraptured in front of anything for days on end. But, my two-year-old has an attention span of one and a half seconds.

And when the books tell you to take advantage of a miserable situation by turning it into fun, I almost gag (even though I have in the past allowed the kids to draw pictures with their fingers in the dirt on my picture window).

At any rate, I thought a rainy day box sounded like a particularly good idea and I gathered some things together, put them in a box and waited for a rainy day. And waited. And waited. Here in the Texas Panhandle we don't get too many rainy days. I waited through September, October and November. Finally, in late December, it snowed. The kids played in the snow.

Then it got colder. Too cold to go outside.

One afternoon, as D'Arcy was screaming at Julie for playing with her toys, and Julie was taking all the canned goods out of the cabinet and stacking them in the bathtub and Rebecca was eating cigarette butts out of an ashtray, I decided this was the day I'd put the rainy box together for.

I ran to get the box and cheerfully announced, "Gather together, my darling tots. Mother has something special for you."

D'Arcy took one look into the box and said, "You mean this junk?" and turned around and continued yelling at Julie.

"Just a minute, dear," I went on, holding my smile just as the book had said, "this will be lots of fun."

And so, at 3 p.m. we sat down to arts and crafts.

D'Arcy cut out paper dolls. Julie laced sewing cards. Rebecca ate paste.

D'Arcy made Christmas ornaments. Julie helped. Rebecca tore them up.

D'Arcy worked with clay. Julie colored pictures. Rebecca scattered paper scraps all over the living room.

D'Arcy made piggy-banks from baby-food jars and artistic objects from junk while Julie turned to making junk from artistic objects.

We drew, we painted and potato block-printed and I felt like the afternoon must surely be almost gone and I'd better start supper. It was 3:15.

"What are we going to do now, Mommy?" the kids yelled.

"You're old enough to take care of yourselves," I snapped.

So D'Arcy is yelling at Julie, and Julie is taking the canned goods out of the cabinet and stacking them in the bathtub and Rebecca is eating cigarette butts.

Back to the books.

Two locals win photo contest

Award-winning photos, taken by two Canyon residents, will be on display at the Kodak Photo Gallery in New York City through March 13 as part of a major presentation of finalists in the 1975 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards (KINSA).

Jack G. Grimm, 101 West 21st Street, is represented by a black-and-white snapshot of his son playing in the dirt in the backyard.

"It was just a natural shot of a natural pose," says the West Texas State University junior.

Herbert D. Hutchins, North of Canyon, a trust officer at the Amarillo National Bank, is represented by a black-and-white portrait of his daughter. A photo hobbyist for just one year, Hutchins snapped the profile shot of young Charla at home in January 1975.

The photos were winners in a regional summer snapshot contest, and as such were submitted to the international competition where they competed for $55,000 in cash and travel prizes. KINSA, sponsored annually by Eastman Kodak Company, last year drew more than 300,000 entries.

The Canyon residents' pictures will be featured at the Kodak Photo Gallery, 1133 Avenue of the Americas (at 43rd Street), along with the black-and-white and color photography of photo amateurs from throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico. The Gallery is open to the public from noon to 5 p.m. Monday and from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Two charged with forgery

Two persons were arraigned here Friday on charges of forgery.

Accused were Deborah Morgan Huey of Amarillo, charged with forgery by passing, and Klaus Schaeffer of Canyon, charged with forgery by making.

According to police, the two are accused of using checks stolen from the Sonic Drive-In.

The forgery charges, which are felonies, will be presented to the grand jury.

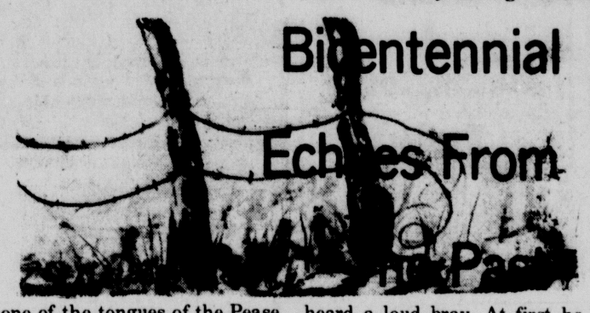
Two officers join city force

Two new officers joined the Canyon police force last month.

They are Jack Foley, Jr., 25 of Amarillo, and David M. Green, 22, from Irving.

Both are without previous police experience, Canyon Police Chief Al Stewart said. However, Green will graduate in May from WTSU with a degree in social science and certification in criminal justice while Foley will be attending classes.



Bicentennial Echoes From the Pease

By JOHN MATTHEWS

Every time I look at the front cover of the 1975 Canyon telephone directory with David Sander's painting of the cowboy on his horse and leading a pack mule, I am reminded of a story my Uncle Gap Keys told me many years ago. Uncle Gap came up from Vernon, Tex., in the 80's to work for the JA's. He was sent wherever they needed extra hands, and this one time he got word that help was urgently needed to help with the spring round-up.

He packed his "hot roll" (that was cowboy talk for a bedroll) on his mule, tied it down good and tight, girded it up, also his frying pan and some provisions and started out, his faithful ole mule following him — he didn't even have to lead him — to contact the outfit. Now-a-days you go right down the highway, stop at a filling station and grab a highway map that tells you just where to go and how many miles, but this wasn't so in those days. He just headed west toward the sun for 50 miles or so.

He spurred on all day long. The JA outfit was working somewhere around the foot of the Caprock, and that was where he was liable to find the wagon.

Well, the shades of night were dropping in on him, and he hadn't located the boys, the wagon, any roundup or anything, and he began to think some serious thoughts. He came to a little creek or river, probably one of the tongues of the Pease River that fork all over the country down there. He could see some movement of horsemen across the creek which was full of water; he plunged down, rode across and found himself surrounded by a dozen or more Indians.

The Indians were almost as surprised as he, and he was terribly surprised. He began to shoot with all he had, right and left, and the Indians shot back, raising all sorts of war whoops. He realized that if he was going to save his scalp, he had to do something drastic. He saw a smooth sand bar up the creek, spurred his horse and desperately hurried up the creek a mile or more. There was a high bluff off to one side with a mesa on top and he spurred his horse up onto this. It was getting dark, and he thought he might stand these Indians off. He didn't know what to do, being in the tightest spot he'd ever been in in his life.

Well, there he was, he thought, surrounded by Indians. He had lost his pack mule, his bedding, and very little ammunition, having used it pretty freely. No chuck, no skillet, no bedroll, no nothin'. He was thinking pretty seriously about what to do. Surveying around, he heard a thrashing in the willows. He got his guns ready, laid them out for some hard shooting. The willows and cottonwoods along the edge of the creek kept parting, and he thought the Indians were coming after him for sure. Suddenly he heard a loud bray. At first he thought it was a war whoop, but there was his faithful ole mule coming on, trailing him up, following him. The mule wouldn't be shook off. All the Indians' yelling and war whoops and the shooting didn't disturb this old mule; he had stayed hot on his trail and out-ridden him. Uncle Gap was never so glad to see anything in his life as this ole mule.

All night long he stood watch. At every twig that cracked, every crow that crowed, every 'possum that came by, or anything that was running, he had his gun out. The sun came up the next morning; he stayed there 'til the mist rolled out of the creek. Finally, he summoned up enough courage to look out on the prairie, and there, about three miles away, he saw the smoke from the wagon camp fire and his pals. Riding over, he told them of his experiences of the night. They all figured that the Indians were as surprised as he was and that all that saved his scalp was that this cow outfit with a dozen or more cowboys was nearby. When the shooting commenced, the Indians were afraid the noise would bring the cowboys down on them.

That's the story I got and I believe it's true.

News errs

The News erred in Thursday's issue by reporting that Dr. Dudley Moore voted against a motion to grant a $3,000 tax exemption to the elderly at the Monday night school board meeting. Dr. Moore told The News last week he voted for the motion.

Mrs. Calvin Wade Yarbrough nee Kathleen Ann Brockman

Double ring marriage vows exchanged

Miss Kathleen Ann Brockman and Calvin Wade Yarbrough were united in marriage at 3 p.m. January 9 at St. Ann's Catholic Church in Canyon.

Father Jack Gist officiated at the double ring ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Brockman of Nazareth and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. V.L. Yarbrough, southeast of Canyon.

Red poinsettia decorated the church altar for the ceremony. The organist, Mary Lynn Wilhelm, accompanied the soloists, Noreen Kelman and Mrs. Richard Hoelting, as they presented the Twelfth of Never, Our Father, In Love We Gather and Prayer For Peace.

Presented in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal length wedding gown of all over white floral patterned chantilly lace featuring a bouffant skirt with four tiers of scalloped chantilly lace sweeping to fullness at the back to form the chapel length train. The wedding gown featured a sabrina neckline with long fitted sleeves and a natural waistline. A chantilly lace caplet held the chapel length illusion veil.

Attendants to the bride were Mary Lynne Cunningham as the maid of honor with the bride's sisters, Gerrie Russell and Teresa Brockman, as bridesmaids. The three bridal attendants wore matching dresses of medium blue which featured fitted bodices with v-neckline styling. The high fitted shaped midriffs were made of white lace and featured flared skirts with full length sleeves gathered to elastic wrists. They carried bouquets of blue and white carnations.

Steve Russell served as best man and groomsmen were Darrell Yarbrough and David Yarbrough, brothers of the bridegroom. Ushering were Jim Brockman and Allan Finney.

A reception for the couple was held at the Nazareth Community Hall after which the couple left for a short wedding trip to points in South Texas. They will be establishing their home at 2009 A 7th Avenue in Canyon.

A graduate of Nazareth High School, the bride is a senior physical education major at West Texas State University where she is a member of Alpha Chi and Kappa Delta Pi. She is vice president for the Physical Education Majors Club at the university and is employed in the Activity Center on campus.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Canyon High School and is a senior physical education major at West Texas State University. He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and is employed with White's Auto Store in Amarillo.

Mrs. Jose Martinez, Jr. nee Royce Jan Holladay

Marriage rites confirmed in double ring ceremony

St. Ann's Catholic Church in Canyon was the setting for the double ring marriage ceremony Saturday evening, January 10, which united Miss Royce Jan Holladay and Jose Martinez, Jr.

Officiating at the nuptial exchange were Rev. Baldwin Stribling, Presbyterian minister, and Father Jack Gist of the Catholic Church. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ruth Holladay of 1303 3rd Avenue, Canyon and Mr. and Mrs. Jose Martinez of 1510 N. 2nd Avenue are parents of the bridegroom.

Branched candelabra of wrought iron entwined with ivy and holding ivory and burgundy tapers decorated the sanctuary. Sisters of the couple, JoTisa Holladay and Amelia Martinez, served as candlelighters. Pews were marked with arrangements of ecru lace and greenery.

Organist was Harold Dean Carson of Olton and soloist was the bride's sister, Mrs. Ottis Patterson of Livingston. Musical selections presented included Together Forever, A Communion Hymn and The Lord's Prayer.

Escorted and presented in marriage by her brother-in-law, Ottis Neil Patterson, the bride wore a dress of candlelight voile which had been designed and made by her mother. The wedding dress was with embroidered self material at the ruffled yoke and on the deep cuffs of the long puff sleeves. The gored skirt was held to an empire waistline and featured a deep flounce at the hemline. The chapel length wedding train was held to a tailored bow at the back waistline and was encircled with matching embroidered fabric.

Red roses and snowflake mums were featured in the bridal bouquet which was carried atop a lace-covered Bible which had been a childhood gift to the bride from her grandparents. Her veil of candlelight illusion was held to an open crown cap of embroidered voile. For something old and borrowed, the bride wore her grandmother's ruby engagement ring and she had a blue garter made for the occasion by her grandmother, Mrs. R.H. Campbell of Amherst, Texas.

Bridgett Timmons served as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Glenda Holladay, sister of the bride, Terri Watson and Rayleen Hillier, all of Canyon. The bridal attendants were gowned in matching burgundy floor length dresses featuring A-line styling. Each dress was accented with a floor length ecru apron trimmed in Irish lace. The bridal attendants wore haloes of baby's breath in their hair and carried arrangements of burgundy carnations with baby's breath and ribbon streamers.

Ricky Richardson of Canyon served as best man. Groomsmen were George Schaffler of Amarillo, Juan Martinez, Jr., a cousin of the bridegroom, and Joe Quintana, Jr., both of Canyon. Ushering were Steve Blake and Ronnie Williams, both of Canyon.

The bride's home at 1303 3rd Avenue, Canyon was the site for the wedding reception following the ceremony. The burgundy and ivory theme of the wedding was repeated in decorations for the reception where the bride's table was covered with ivory lace over a floor-length burgundy cloth. The wedding cake was designed and baked by Vondean McGregor of Amarillo and featured small arrangements of red roses with a gold cross on the top tier. Ivory ceramics and silver appointments were used at the bride's table while the groom's table, which was laid with a hand-embroidered linen cloth, featured appointments of silver and ruby glass.

Houseparty for the reception included Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Killingsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Ricky Mantooth, Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Trice, Mrs. Joe Quintana, Mrs. Juan Martinez, Jr., Mrs. Hazel Sunderman, and Misses Anita Martinez, Angelina Martinez, Margarita Martinez, Sheila Thomason, Jill Mantooth, Julie Mantooth, and Michell Killingsworth, all of Canyon, along with Miss Kammie Campbell of Amherst and Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Maguire of Pampa.

After the wedding reception, the bride changed to a three piece pantsuit of burgundy, gray and blue accented with a rosebud corsage for the wedding trip to Lake Brownwood in central Texas.

Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of Canyon High School. The bride presently attends West Texas State University where she is a junior biology education major and is employed with the United Campus Ministry and the Episcopal Student Center. The bridegroom attended West Texas State University where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. He is employed with Irwin's Greenhouses, Inc.

The couple will establish their home in Canyon at the Medford Trailer Park after January 19.

Two federated clubwomen nominees for district awards this spring

Heritage Woman's Club of Canyon has nominated two members for Top of Texas district contests seeking the "outstanding junior clubwoman" and the "outstanding leadership development award."

Mrs. John Plank, president of the club, announced that Mrs. Larry Brandon and Mrs. Carl Hollabaugh are the club's nominees for the district awards and have been "outstanding workers in the local club". District winners will be announced at the spring convention in Dalhart April 2-3.

Nominated for the "outstanding junior clubwoman" competition is Mrs. Harriet Brandon, who was a charter member of the HWC federated club in 1969. Mrs. Brandon has served as president, treasurer, secretary, yearbook chairman, and reporter-historian for the club at the local level. She has also held a variety of club chairmanships and committee assignments and currently serves as the Top of Texas District Junior Director. She was chairman of the TFWC outstanding clubwoman contest in 1974 and is currently a candidate for the state junior directorship 1976-78.

Mrs. Brandon attended Sullins, University of Houston, Texas Tech and West Texas State University where she received her B.A. degree in 1963. Her husband is a law partner in Perdue, Brandon & Blair in Amarillo and the couple has one daughter, Tracy, age 4. She was named as the Top of Texas District's Outstanding Clubwoman in 1973 and has earned numerous awards and positions during her membership in Alpha Delta Pi social sorority.

As a community oriented individual, Mrs. Brandon served with the board of directors for the Canyon Division of the Opportunity Plan Inc. at West Texas State University during 1973-74 and was the founding president of the Canyon Junior Forum during 1973-74. She taught junior high English and Spanish for three years in Waco and served as curriculum writer for the Waco Independent School District in 1966 where she was the co-author of the Curriculum Guide for English, Grades 9-12, and was the English Department chairman, 1966-67.

The nominee for the "outstanding leadership development award" at the district competition is Darlene Hollabaugh of Canyon's Heritage Woman's Club. A native of Borger, Mrs. Hollabaugh served as the club's president during 1972-73 and during her active affiliation with the club has been involved in a number of departmental and committee leadership roles.

This past spring she served as the recruiting chairman of the club's Kid Power talent show and is currently the projects chairman for 1975-76. She has held departmental positions in public affairs, Texas Heritage and the Arts department of the club.

As current ways and means chairman of her club, she is responsible for fundraising projects which have included a Tupperware party this fall as well as the communitywide Arts Americana festival in November. She is also the bicentennial chairman for her club this year and during 1972-73 was named as the club member of the year.

This past fall, she was recognized in the 'Outstanding Young Women Of America' publication. She was graduated from West Texas State University in 1963 with a B.S. degree in elementary education and taught second grade in Amarillo for four years. She and her husband, Carl Hollabaugh, have two children, Scott, a second grade student, and Lori, age 4.

Other than federated clubwork, Mrs. Hollabaugh is an active member of the Rex Reeves Parent-Teacher Association and belongs to the Langley Group for Baptist women. She is a teacher for the Wee School of First Baptist Church and director for the second grade Sunday School department of the church.

Both district contests are designed so that local clubs may recognize their outstanding members who have served in outstanding capacities at the local level.

The leadership development contest is designed to encourage clubwomen to take an active part in clubwork which develops their talents, personality and leadership abilities. Candidates seeking the outstanding leadership development award must have been a federated club member for a period of 2 but less than 10 years and must have successfully directed an educational, social, cultural or civic project within their own community during the current clubyear.

The outstanding junior clubwoman's district contest is a prerequisite leading up to the competition in the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs state contest where one junior clubwoman from Texas will be recognized. Candidates for the honor must have been a member of the local federated club for at least three years before being nominated in the contest. Nomination for the award recognizes the achievements of club members above and beyond the normal requirements and is a recognition for exceptional ability and the highest acclaim for a combination of talents developed through federated clubwork.

Irish stew boasts thick creamy gravy

A taste of tender lamb and fine white potatoes in a thick creamy gravy are what Irishmen prefer in their stewpot.

Although stews and soups are hardy fare worldwide, the true Irish Stew doesn't have the added vegetables such as carrots or turnips and doesn't swim in a juice like soup.

A delicious, homey and soul-satisfying dinner for the budget conscious family can focus on the traditional Irish Stew served with slices of homebaked bread and mugs of chilled milk or steaming coffee.

TRADITIONAL IRISH STEW
3 lbs. trimmed lamb shoulder chops
2 lbs. small potatoes
1 lb. onions
1 tblsp. chopped parsley and thyme, mixed
2 cups water
Salt and Pepper

Place the chops around the inside edge of a heavy iron pot or casserole. Put the peeled onions and peeled potatoes in the middle, giving each a good sprinkling of the herbs and seasonings. Add water, cover and cook very slowly about two hours or until meat is very tender.

In another version the potatoes and onions are sliced and put in the pot in layers with the meat; potatoes on the bottom, then meat, then onions, with seasonings sprinkled on each layer and liquid poured over all. Simmer or bake very slowly for 2 hours.

Serves about 6.

Merlin the Magician on how to solve your heating problem

"Those drafty old castles are notorious even today for being dreadfully hot in summer and frigidly cold in winter. We didn't have the heat pump in those days, of course. I think what I like best about the heat pump is its simplicity. One unit provides heating and cooling . . . complete comfort in any kind of weather with one setting of the thermostat. And the heat pump is environmentally-sound . . . when heating, it actually provides more energy than it uses. Yes, if I'd had a heat pump, I wouldn't have been so cranky about passing on my magic secrets . . ."

Canyon free of serious crime; but lesser crimes increase

Canyon remained free of serious crime in 1975 but there was a considerable increase in such offenses as burglary and theft.

Year-end crime statistics compiled this week by the police department show an increase in burglary from 46 offenses reported in 1974 to 79 reported last year.

Thefts of all types rose from 80 complaints in '74 to 111 reports in 1975.

But there were no serious crimes such as murder or rape reported here during the year. Two aggravated assaults were investigated in '75 and, in one of the cases, a local resident was charged with attempted murder.

Police Chief Al Stewart attributed the increase in the less serious crimes to both an increase in the population and a greater willingness to report crime.

"We've got more people and more people reporting crimes," he said.

Statistics for December show city police investigated a total of 48 offenses, compared to 42 in November. There were three burglaries and 13 thefts reported during the month. Most of the burglaries this year have involved CB radios taken from cars, police say, while the theft catagory includes shoplifting and thefts of all kinds.

There were nine reports of vandalism during December to bring the yearly total to 46, a slight increase over the 43 reported in 1974.

Auto theft dropped sharply in the city, with only four stolen cars reported for the year, compared with 15 reported the year before.

There were more drug offenses last year than there were in '74. Police list 30 reports of drug violations in '75 compared to only 19 the previous year.

In all, there were 485 crimes reported in 1975. This was a sharp rise from the previous year when 361 crimes were reported.

There were more arrests last year also, although arrests lagged behind reported offenses. A total of 31 burglary arrests were made during the year, compared to seven in 1974 and 34 arrests for theft were made compared to 18 the year before.

Police made 289 arrests last year, an increase from the 201 arrests in 1974.

Traffic accidents dropped sharply last month, but the total for the year was up. There were 20 accidents investigated in December, compared to 32 in November but there were 297 accidents for the year, compared to 231 in 1974.

Police issued 2350 traffic citations in 1975, an increase over the 2118 issued the year before.

Study expected on city parks

An engineering study expected to be completed in about ten days will help set a price tag on proposals by the parks and recreation committee.

The study, being done now by city engineering consultant Bill McMorries, will determine the cost of excavation and fill work in developing several properties under consideration for recreational uses.

George Ritter, committee chairman, said he was waiting on the report before he calls another committee meeting.

The committee, organized last fall, so far is operating without funds. An earlier commitment by the city commissioners of $10,000 for recreation will be included in the coming budget, but it is unlikely, according to city manager Glen Metcalf, that any more city money will be available next year.

Ritter said he assumes that the $10,000 promised earlier by the school district is still available also but that he has not asked.

Other possible sources of funds the committee has considered include a bond issue election, perhaps this spring, and matching state recreation funds. However, an early-December deadline to apply for state funds during the next six months was not met, which will delay any state monies.

Bob Henry seeks post

Canyon resident Bob Henry has filed to run on the Democratic ticket for county commissioner of precinct 3, the precinct representing the Canyon and South Randall County areas.

Henry, a candidate in 1972 for the office, is the first candidate to announce intentions to run for the seat which Commissioner Paul Lindsey has said he will not seek to fill for a second term.

"I want to get in and help hold the line on taxes," Henry said of his candidacy. "The government has been run good. It seems to be in good shape as far as I can tell.

"People are taxed from every direction and I think we could cut down on expenditures."

Henry, a farmer and rancher, moved to the Canyon area 27 years ago and graduated from Happy High School. He graduated from West Texas State University in 1960.

He and his wife, Della, own Deon's, a Canyon dress shop. He is president of the Randall County Farmers Union.

AMONG THE MANY Canyon folks who traveled to Red River over the holidays for a skiing vacation were the Clinton Glens. The snow was excellent and skiing was great for Clinton and Jimmie and their youngsters, Brenda, Cheri and Ross.

A STEER THAT didn't want to go to the Randall County Junior Livestock Show held here Saturday created a bit of excitement Friday morning. The hefty, black crossbred jumped out of the truck as FFA student Bob Lindsey was transporting him to the show. While Lindsey was in the back of the truck trying to rope his steer, a police escort kept the animal separated from parents bringing kids to Rex Reeves School. Finally the steer was roped and ended up in the show barn anyway where Lindsey spent the rest of the day brushing his animal and lamenting the 30 pounds he estimated the steer lost in his attempted escape.

DR. AND MRS. Walter Juniper have returned from a three-week visit with their daughter and her family in Ventura, Calif. This was the 13th year the Junipers have spent Christmas in California with Margaret and Gail Gerblick and their youngsters, Cindy, 6, and Scott, 4.

Driving home, they lingered a few days in Las Cruces, N.M. to wait for snow to clear from the roads.

$70,000 in fund coffer

With four months remaining before he must produce $125,000 to balance his budget, West Texas State University Athletic Director Gene Mayfield already has more than half that amount in pledges.

Mayfield said Thursday pledges to support the program so far total $70,000.

"There's no question we'll make it," he said of the $125,000 WTSU regents have told him he must raise by the first of May.

Even though he's opted for pledges in his campaign to balance the athletic department budget, Mayfield said those who are pledging "understand the money must be in prior to May 1."

The Buffalo Club, with Mayfield heading the drive, has been primarily responsible for raising the funds.

Regents in early December 1975 told Mayfield he must raise $125,000 to balance his deficit budget by May 1 or cut his budget by the amount of money he fails to raise.

Already, with $70,000 pledged, the drive this year has topped total outside funds received by the athletic department for the 1975-76 school year. The Buffalo Club came up with $60,000 for the current year.

Regents will meet at the end of this month to review the possibility of forming a permanent Athletic Council, made up of interested Panhandle region supporters, to carry out fund-raising for the department on a continuous basis. They will also eye the possibility of hiring a full-time public relations expert for the university.

Mayfield said he hopes he can show regents when they meet to review his efforts in May that enough money for athletics can be raised in the region to justify the salary of a full-time fund-raiser.

In the past, the university has sporadically had a full-time fund-raiser, the most recent one being renowned Olympics champion shot putter Randy Matson.

PE classes join just for fun

It has nothing to do with the prohibitions against sexual discrimination in the Title IX aid to education act, but two of the boys and girls physical education classes were combined this week at the junior high.

P. E. teachers Eddie Smith and Donna Cavrich mixed their ninth grade and seventh grade classes for a unit on volleyball and perhaps later some square dancing.

While the ninth grade boys and girls classes have been combined in previous years for dancing, this is the first time the seventh graders have been mixed. Scheduling doesn't permit the eighth grade PE classes to combine.

Mrs. Cavrich said she thought the co-ed volleyball will be a good program. The youngsters are learning the rules for mixed play rather than playing the boys against the girls.

"The boys would like it that way," she said, "because they would win most of the time but the girls would get tired of being beaten."

Mixed volleyball rules require boys and girls to alternate hitting the ball, she said.

Mrs. Cavrich said she hoped to have a tournament for the teams at the end of the four-week unit.

News brief

The Canyon Mother-in-law Club will meet at 2 p.m. Thursday in the home of Mrs. J.N. Seay, 2205 7th Ave. Members are reminded of the change in meeting time.

CBers planning potluck session

Buffalo Breakers CB Club will be meeting Thursday evening, Jan. 15, for a potluck supper session at the Fellowship Hall of the First Christian Church in Canyon.

All local residents interested in citizens band radio activities are invited to join the festivities. Participants are asked to provide a covered dish for the potluck meal which begins at 7:30 p.m.

know these men and talk with each school board member before he starts running them down. He has never attended a school board meeting or tried to meet one of these men. He never attended either of the two town hall meetings for public information on the bond issues. If he had attended these meetings, he would have the facts and issues straight, and he also would have found a very hard-working group of men. These men give their time freely for one purpose — the children of Canyon and South Amarillo, and the best education they can give them.

I am sorry he does not care to meet any of us. Six of our eight children were here for the holidays, and they wanted to meet Mr. Collins, too. We wanted him to come visit our home. It seems strange a man who has lived here such a short time can tell Canyon citizens how to vote.

All these men work so hard to do what is best for our children. Thank you, Lord, for each one of them.

Mrs. Dudley Moore, Jr.

CJHS girls lose three

Canyon junior high girls lost three basketball games Thursday to Dimmitt.

The seventh grade white team was downed 32-25 in a game that was closer than the score indicated.

With never more than three or four points difference in the score, the Canyon girls at one point tied Dimmitt before falling behind toward the end of the game.

Canyon's Tennie Orick took scoring honors for the game with 11 points while guards Debra Drost and Teresa Stone turned in good work on the defense.

The eighth grade white team had an off night, losing 34-22. Stacy Liles with 10 points was the only Canyon player in double figures.

Youth hospitalized again after holiday shooting

A Canyon teenager who was shot in the abdomen during the Christmas holidays was hospitalized this week for the third time since the shooting.

Craig Johnson, 17, was listed in satisfactory condition late Friday at High Plains Baptist Hospital after he was admitted on Wednesday.

The CHS senior was shot with a .22 calibre pistol shortly after midnight on Dec. 26 following an argument that took place in the lobby of the Buffalo Motel.

J.C. Stevens, a Canyon resident, was arrested at the scene and charged with attempted murder. At the arraignment, he indicated a plea of not guilty and an examining trial is planned to determine if sufficient evidence exists to present the case to the grand jury for indictment.

No date for the examining trial has been set because Johnson, so far, has been unable to testify.

The Canyon High senior was treated following the shooting at Northwest Texas Hospital and was released several hours later.

Corley says check office for lost coats

Junior high students who have lost coats, jackets, gloves and such at school are asked to look at the office.

There is a good chance that the missing garment will be there, said CJHS principal Dave Corley.

Every year, he said, a truck load of unclaimed coats and cold weather gear is taken to the Salvation Army. Corley asked parents to remind their youngsters to look at the office if they lost a coat.

Steak house to open here

Two brothers from Hereford will open a steak house in Canyon this spring.

A ground breaking was held by Greg and Cliff Herring Wednesday in sub-freezing weather for "The Railroad Crossing."

The new restaurant, to be built on 14th Avenue and the access road, will open sometime in April and will feature shrimp, catfish and all kinds of steaks, said Greg Herring.

The building, to be constructed by Accent Building Systems, is a pre-engineered steel facility with a stone front. "The Railroad Crossing" is designed to seat 175 people with private rooms for meetings and parties. Off street parking will accommodate about 60 vehicles.

Greg Herring moved to Canyon this week from Hereford and Cliff is attending the university here.

$1,500 is goal for city march

A goal of $1500 has been set by the Canyon March of Dimes, which will be held on Jan. 24 and 25 here.

The goal was set last week at a kick-off meeting for the annual drive.

Those attending included Mrs. Janet Hand of the Canyon Dames; Mrs. Susan Barnett of the Heritage Woman's Club; Mrs. Janet Fincher and Brenda Taylor of the Canyon High School FHA; Russell Moore of WTSU Scabbard and Blade; Mrs. Nancy Boston of Canyon Study Club; and Mrs. Judy Wilson, Golden Spread director.

NCAA. . .

Bullock said the NCAA generally follows the same penalties adopted by the conference.

"There are 12 types of penalties," Bullock said, "and we (the athletic committee) picked out one of these outselves. The Valley went along and we're hoping they go along, but they can pick another one."

The university decided not to appeal the MVC decision.

Bullock and other WTSU officials met with the NCAA infractions committee in mid-December to answer the charges against the basketball program.

An Amarillo oil-well driller, Max Banks, has admitted he was responsible for the recruiting violations when he tried to recruit a Detroit athlete for the university.

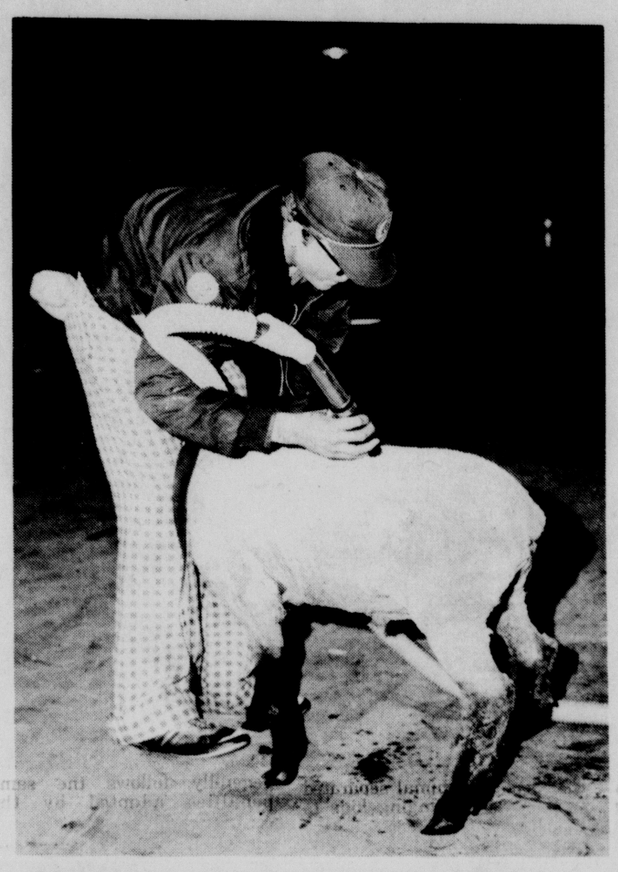
Weather good for stock show

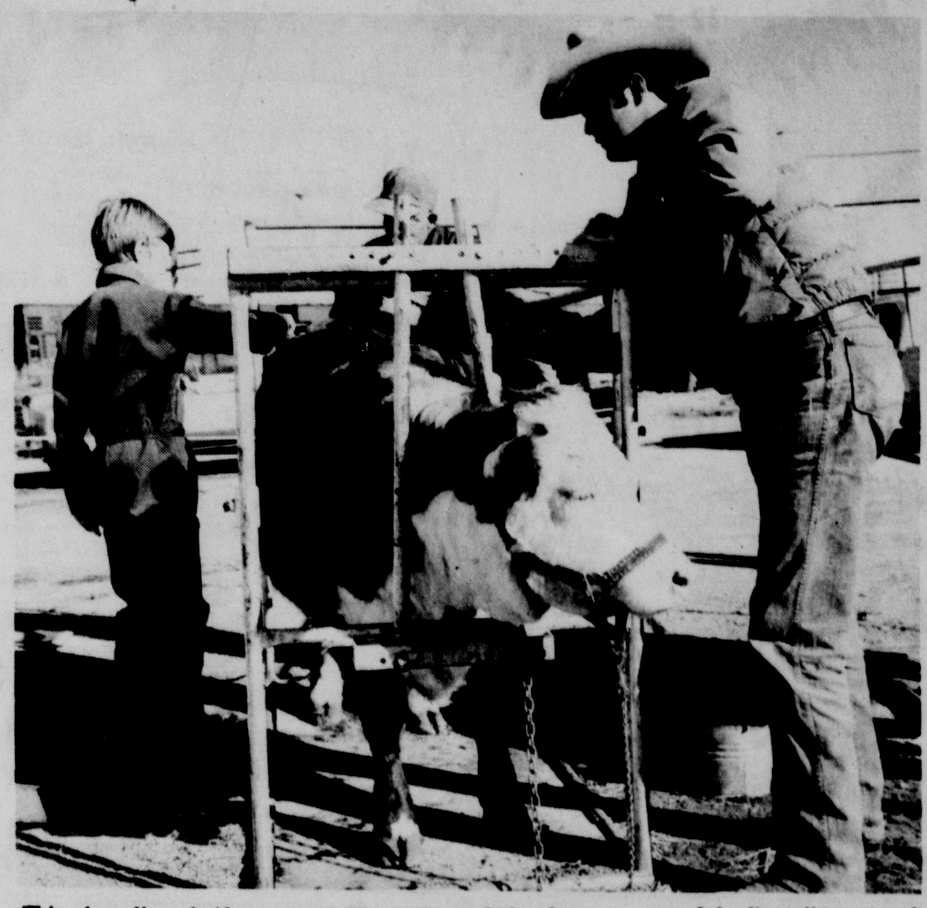
"But I don't want to take a bath."



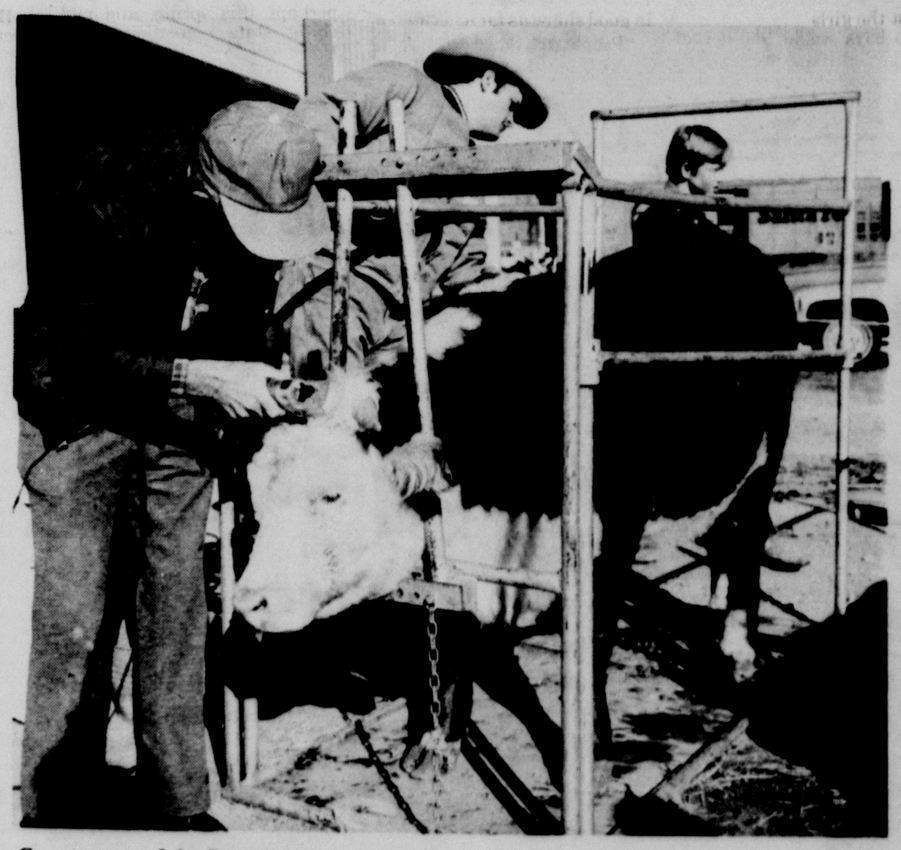
After the bath, a blow-dryer is applied to fluff the wool.

It was wet work as animals were groomed Friday in preparation for the show the next day.

Blackie, the wayward steer who escaped on the way to the show, gets a good grooming after his owner, Bob Lindsey, recaptured the animal.



This breeding heifer owned by Galen Hartman (left) gets a going over with some help of county agent John Brazzil (rear) and assistant agent Paul Sammons, (right).



County agent John Brazzil wields clippers to give this heifer a clean face as assistant agent Paul Sammons gives owner Galen Hartman a hand with grooming.

Rub-a-dub-dub, the lamb gets a scrub for the junior livestock show held here Saturday.

Grooming the feet is a must before this lamb is shown.
